

Kathleen Poe and Jon Ross, Goldring class of 2007, are engaged! They first met at an unofficial Newhouse graduate student cookout the day before classes began in 2006. After graduation, they moved south to Atlanta, Ga., Kathleen's hometown, where they have been ever since. Fittingly for two music journalists, Jon proposed in the middle of an indie-rock concert.

Kathleen is currently communications coordinator at the Atlanta Development Authority and has written for U.S. Catholic, Y'all and Westminster magazines as well as for local weekly papers and blogs. Outside of work and freelance, Kathleen is a church choir section leader and soloist and a member of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra Chorus, with which she appeared onstage at Carnegie Hall and the Berlin Philharmonie last year. She's trying to get her new arts blog, atlantaartsreview.blogspot.com <http://atlantaartsreview.blogspot.com>, off the ground in any remaining free time.

Jon, who hails from Moscow, Idaho, is the associate editor of the Atlanta-based commercial real estate magazine Southeast Real Estate Business. He has written for Creative Loafing, Sunday Paper, Atlanta INtown, ChopTalk, and Paste and is a contributing writer for DownBeat magazine. In his spare time, Jon combs the city, searching for local jazz to promote on his blog, jazzlanta.blogspot.com <http://jazzlanta.blogspot.com/>.
